

Singular wave

Depicted are three curves of an infinite family of cubic curves all going through the same three points. The singular wave (orange) is special because it visits one of those points twice.

In Singular wave something catastrophic is about to happen; a violet blob launches itself into an orange sky.